NEWSLETTER

Dear Parents,

A newsletter in the holidays? These are strange times indeed!

I just wanted to remind you that it is 'Back to School' on Monday. Sort of. Sadly, there will be no dropping your children off at the school door ☹, but teachers will be sending out daily activities for your children to complete. Hopefully, after a break, you and your children will be eager and excited to get back to work!

Finished already?

Alfie S has asked for a new writing book already! Amazing. When you fill up your writing or maths book, please let us know and we can arrange for you to drop off your old one and collect a new one. We may be able to collect and deliver if getting to school is difficult for you. We do need the old books please as a record of what you have been doing at home. Please also let your teacher know if you need new reading books – again, we will see what we can do to help. In fact, if there is anything you think we can help with, please do ask. You will not be alone. We're all struggling with the demands of this new strange life we find ourselves in. We can't promise we will have an answer, but we will listen and maybe direct you to someone who can help.

The Great Outdoors

The school nature table is looking a little unloved, although the willow twigs are still growing. Why don't you make a nature table at home? Remember to date and label your finds and then maybe take a photo and send to me? Lots of other ideas here:

Have a great weekend!
